

The Washington Times

www.washingtontimes.com

Correction

Published November 29, 2006

Using a chart published in a 2005 U.N. Population Fund report -- which the U.N. agency now says was misleading -- a London Daily Telegraph article published in Nov. 13 editions of The Washington Times incorrectly stated the frequency of wife abuse in India. The agency says that it does not have sufficient data to provide such a figure and that the chart was intended to show that 70 percent of Indian women who were abused by their husbands think such abuse is justified in at least some circumstances.

Advertisement

NEW! Experience the sharpest job search engine.

Jobs in your city

- Bangalore
- Hyderabad
- Delhi
- Chennai
- Mumbai
- Ahmedabad
- Pune
- Chandigarh
- Kolkata

Click to search jobs now

 monster.com
Sharp search. Right jobs.

MonsterIndia.com Ads by Goooooogle

Copyright © 2007 News World Communications, Inc. All rights reserved.

Return to the article

Want to use this article? Click here for options!

Copyright The Washington Times valeoip beacon